Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Saturday 04 Dec 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Unsettled, showery and windy this weekend.

Today:
Rain clearing eastwards, then most parts seeing a mixture of sunny spells and blustery showers. The showers heaviest and most frequent in the north and west, whilst more persistent rain and hill snow affects northern parts. Cold and windy.

Tonight:
Clear spells and showers, these mostly in areas exposed to the northwest. More persistent rain and hill snow affecting some eastern parts. Remaining windy, but frosty in sheltered spots.

Sunday:
Further showery rain across some eastern areas, perhaps edging into central parts but dying out. Sunniest across western parts as showers die out. Winds easing but staying cold.

Outlook for Monday to Wednesday:
Band of rain moving east Monday, preceded by snow, mainly on hills. Wet and increasingly windy Tuesday, with coastal gales in the west. Staying windy with blustery showers on Wednesday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.